

ABSTRACT

The invention relates to a process, in particular for a process for generating electrical power and/or heat, in which a gas mixture is formed from oxygen, fuel and substantially nitrogen-free inert gas and is burnt in a burner (3). In order to ensure stable combustion even in the case of a relatively high amount of inert gas, the combustion is embodied as flameless combustion.